The Shadow Warriors of Nakano

A history of the Imperial Japanese Army's Elite Intelligence School

Stephen C. Mercado

Introduces the spies and commandos who were at the center of key
Japanese operations during World War II

Outlines their continued influence in postwar Japan

Stephen C. Mercado has written a pioneering study of the Imperial Japanese Army's Nakano School, which trained spies, intelligence officers, and commandos between 1938 and 1945. Working in the shadows, its graduates raided Allied targets, attempted to subvert British rule in India, and organized guerrillas for the final defense of Japan. After the war, many of these skilled veterans worked with American intelligence and held prominent positions in Japanese industry and the government. A rare account of Imperial Japan's most dynamic soldiers.
